Just an Old Man With a Walking Stick

A couple moved into a new house in the city. They paid no attention to the Lord’s Day except as a day of rest and recreation. They observed an old crippled man with a walking stick coming down the street each Sunday morning at 9:30. They inquired about him and were told by the neighbors that he goes every Sunday to a small church building on the corner to worship God.

One Sunday in mid-winter, with sub-zero weather and a thick layer of ice on the ground and the streets, the man wondered, “Will the old man go to church today?” He watched for him. About 9:30 he saw the old man almost crawling on the treacherous ice with a nail in the bottom of his walking stick. The young man decided to follow him and see what kind of religion it was that would cause a man of his condition to “go to church” in this kind of weather.

Many are on the road to heaven because of that kind of example or demonstration of Christianity.
